

Station Wagon Spy
Kepler Advantage
Inilex

Time was parents had to check the odometer to see how far teen drivers took the family car. Inilex, based in Scottsdale, Ariz., removes the mystery with Kepler Advantage, which tracks a car using a combination of GPS and wireless data technology. When the kids drive too fast or go somewhere they're not supposed to, Mom or Dad can get a text message sent to a wireless phone. The device can also handle remote-control tasks, such as unlocking doors and checking tire pressure, from a PC or cell phone.
